OF DEATHS, that annually occur, are caused by Preventable Diseases, and the greater portion of those complaints would, if Radway's Ready Relief or Pills, (as the case may require,) were administered when pain or uneasiness or slight sickness is experienced, be exterminated from the system in a few hours. PAIN, no matter from what cause, is almost instantly cured by the Ready Relief. In cases of Cholera, Diarrhœa, Cramps, Spasms Bilious Cholie, in fact all Pains, Aches and Infirmities either in the Stomach, Bowels, Bladder, Kidneys, or the Joints, Muscles, Legs, Arms, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Fever and Ague, Headache, Toothache, &c., will in a FEW MINUTES yield to the soothing influence of the Ready Relief.

Sudden Colds, Coughs, Influenza, Dip-theria, Honrseness, Sore Throat Chills, Fever and Ague, Mercurial Pains, Scarlet Fever, &c., &c., take from four to six of Radway's Pills, and also take a tenspoonful of the Rendy Relief in a glass of warm water, sweetened with sugar or honey; bathe the throat, head and chest with Ready Relief (if Ague or Intermittent Fever, bathe the spine also,

MARRIED TO-DAY. Married to-day, in the finsh of youth And the sun smiles warmly down, To kies the blush on the dimplet cheek,

And your ways hair of brown. Ab! may it prove but an emblem true, Of your future happy life, And the tender care of the man who said:

A girl no more, but the mistress fair Of a cherished home to be Yet forever, Alice, will you see Just the same bright girl to me. Were to change you to us all— But the friendly visits now must be But a formal happy call.

Ah, no! the laugh from your happy heart, Will ring just as silvery clear; Your eyes will beam just as jayously With each swift succeeding year. And when old ago, with a gentle hand, Points the way to the mansion blest: To that haven sure of rest. -Claude Vincent Courtney.

The Engineer was Drunk. BY W. S. WALLACE

I have been an engineer ever since the -- road was laid. I have traveled over it every day for a good many years. For a long while I have had the same engine in charge—the San Francisco, and it is as well managed-if I say it myself-as

It was on a southwestern road, running from A to Z. - At A my good old mother lived, and at Z I had the sweetest little wife under the sun and a couple of babies; I also had a few dollars laid up for a rainy I was an odd sort of man, and some people thought me unsociable, as I wasn't a great talker; but then being shut up with the engine, watching intently outside and in, don't make a man talkative.

I never had belonged to any society, or mixed much with strangers any way, and never should if it had not been for Farley. Farley was a young, handsome, showy fel-low, and one of the shareholders; I liked to talk with him and admired his society. He often rode from Z to A with me and "You ought to belong to some scientific fortnight, and have a jolly time. I'll propose you if you like." I was fond of such amusements, and had ideas. I funcied might be worth something. But an engineer don't have too many days and nights to himself, and that would take one evening a fortnight from Joe. I made so answer; but at home I told Joe, and

"I'll miss you Wort; but I know you love such amusement. As Farley is a member of the club, it must be composed of superior men."
"No doubt of it," said I.

"It is not everybody that could become a member, and of course you say yes." So I told Farley and he proposed me. Thursday fortnight I went to the rooms; there were some men with brains, and some men without any; but the real business of the meeting was the ₹upper, and so it was every meeting. I had always been a temperate man, and actually did not know what effect liquor would have on me. I drank more of it at the club table than I ever did before. I found it put on steam; after a number of glasses I wanted to talk : after a few more I did talk. It seemed like some one else, the words were so ready. My little ideas came out and were listned to. I told stories; I even came to puns. I heard somebody say to Farley: "By George! that fellow is worth having: I thought him dull at first."

Yet I thought it was better to be quiet Wort Smith, with his ten words an hour, than the wine-mad wit I was. I was sure of it three hours after, when I stumbled ome, to find Joe waiting for

I fit to take charge of the engine? I was not fit to answer. I ought to have asked some sober man to take my place for the some sober man to take my place for the run. As it was, I only caught up my hat and rushed away; I was just in time. The San Francisco glittered in the morning sun; the cars were filling rapidly. From my post I could hear the people talking—bidding each other good-bye, promising to write and to soon make another visit. bidding each other good-bye, promising to write and to soon make another visit. A mong the crowd was an old gentleman I knew by sight—one of the shareholders of the road. He was bidding two timid girls adies: "Good-bye, Kitty; good-bye, Sue," I heard him say: "don't be nervous. "Brother Crafford," who eujoys a joke hogely, tells us the following good one: Meeting in his late political journeyings an honest specimen of the genus home from the "sanny clime," he interrogated him as follows: "I suppose you intend to vote for Seymour and Blair!"

"You better bet I don't!" was the answer.
"Then you go for Grant and Colfax?"
"No sir-ee: I'm an old line Whig, and am going for Henry Clay, by G-d. I know he's dead, but, by thunder, I'd rather go for a first-class corpse than for such a h-i-roaring 'statesman' as Seymour."

we had passed the flag. I heard a shrick. We had passed the down train at the wrong place.

"Two minutes more and we should have had a collision," some one said to me; I laughed. I heard him say respectfully:

"Of course, Mr. Smith, you know what you're about."

Then I was nione, and wondering wheth. Then I was alone, and wondering whether I should go faster or slower; I did something and the cars rushed on at a fearful rate. Then I heard some one ask how many miles we were making. I did not know. Rattle—rattle! I was now trying to slacken the speed of the San Francisco, but I could not remember what was to do. Was it this, or that?—Faster—faster! I was playing with the engine like a child. Faster—faster! I was playing with the engine like a child.

Suddenly there was a horrible roar—a crash—and I was flung somewhere; it was in the water. By a miracle I was only sobered, not hurt. I gained the shore and stood upon the ground between the track and the water's edge, gazing at my work. The engine was in fragments, the car in splinters; dead, dying and wounded were strewn around—men, women and children, old age and tender youth. There were groans and shricks of despair—the mained cried out in pain; the uninjured bewailed their dead, and a voice, unheard by others, continually whispered in my ear: "Murderer!" Murderer!"
The news had gone back to A, and the ed, save from large seas? Now, we can copie came thronging down to find their hardly see on what grounds it can reason-tiends. The dead were stretched out on ably be doubted that these white spots are

There is some-thing singularly striking in the contrast between the small, sharply-defined ellipse of white light around the pole of that hemisphere which is enjoying the Martial summer, and the irregular and wide-spread-ing tracts of snewy light around the cold pole. In the winter, these tracts extend as far from the pole as 45 degrees, a cir-cumstance which indicates an extent of snow-fall corresponding very closely to that which in winter covers the northern parts there never could be; and as I comprehended this, up the track thundered another train. Its red eye glared on me! I finng myself before it! I felt it crush me to atoms:

It was a dream—an awful dream; but I had lived through it as though it was a relief to the suppose of the surface of Mars, partially modifying the aspect of the fundamental features, and even in some cases disguising them under new lights and shades, which present no constancy—a thin, vaporous at-mosphere, probably resting on a surface of land, snow and water."-Fraser's Mag

The Alex.—The Alex are discrowned. For more than a hundred years Mont Blanchas been treated as the monarch of European mountains; the peaks in the Northern part of Caucasus being either unknown or forgotten. Few people thought they were in Europe; all the heights standing on the Eastern shores of the Euxine being generally considered, like the main chain of the Casacasus, as in Asia. Yet Elbrous and Kashekare both in Europe, and as three of our Alpine climbers have just been to their summits (respectively 18,528 feet and 16,540 feet), they are in future to be known as the rivals and superiors to Mont Blanc. The ascents were not difficult, considered as mere climbing, but the country is said to be rough, and the character of the people in the valleys bad.
